

3.2.2.3.2.43 Personal freedom and multiple citizenship

Laws against multiple citizenship restrict personal freedom. For what?

Do governments believe that by restricting multiple citizenship, they assure the loyalty of its citizens?

People have a more practical approach. They consider the benefits of holding this or that country's passport.

Third World countries that compete for rich foreign residents and direct foreign investment could gain a competitive edge by granting secondary citizenships.