

3.2.2.3.2.57 Making conditions in Europe more favorable for men

Men could act to make conditions at their locations more favorable. But trying to convince women to give up on social structures that are beneficial to the sexual interests of women as opposed to the sexual interests of men will achieve little.

Western men often feel that actually, they have many good qualities. Western men are usually less violent in relationships with women than men in other cultures. Western men probably feel more restraint towards gang raping women than men in other cultures. Western men make more attempts in being accommodating towards the feelings of women. Western men often have a good amount of intellectual professional capabilities to manage the economic foundations of a partnership.

But Western men often feel that women, especially feminists, do not appreciate the qualities of Western men. Western men often feel that fault is put on them indiscriminately.

In Western Europe, this could probably be ameliorated quickly and fundamentally by allowing a lot of migration of people from geographic fringes where male behavior towards women is less respectful. Feminists would then view Western men less negative.